

Programme:

The final programme of the 33rd DOT is now available online: www.dot2017.de. You will get a printed copy of this programme together with the conference documents at your registration on arrival. All changes in the programme that occurred after the editorial deadline will be announced immediately before the conference on the website and on notice boards at the information desk.

Social programme:

All excursions offered in our social programme are already full. There are, however, still numerous places available for the DOT Party at the “Rosenkeller” on Thursday evening. You may attend this party even spontaneously, as there will be a box office on site. Please note that there is no barrier-free access to the vault cellar!

There are also still tickets available for the reception offered by the Major of the city of Jena in the City Hall on Monday evening. Since the capacity in this historical building is extremely limited, you are kindly requested to send a short informal application via e-mail (dot2017@uni-jena.de).

Information for speakers:

As you can see in the programme, each presentation has a time limit of 30 minutes maximum. As a rule, this means 20 minutes for presentation and 10 minutes for discussion. Speakers are kindly asked to keep in time, since with more than 900 presentations, we have a tight programme, which allows seamlessly to switch between different sections and panels only if everybody maintains discipline.

If you intend to give a computer-based presentation, please bring a USB stick with your presentation in Power Point and PDF format. Computers, furnished with common MS office software, as well as beamers will be available in each room. If you intend to use your own computer, please contact us in advance! In this case, please make sure that you bring the proper VGA or HDMI adapter with you. You are requested to submit your digital presentation, 15 minutes before the beginning of your panel or (in case of a single presentation) before the relevant session, to the panel organizer or our auxiliary staff, respectively, in the particular room.

If you intend to use non-digital media (overhead projector or the like), please contact us beforehand! Note that every room is equipped with a blackboard or whiteboard. To print handouts, you may use the copy-shops nearby the Campus (Bachstraße) and the university's main building (Universitätshauptgebäude, Schlossgasse).

Arriving at Jena:

Coming by train, you will get off at one of Jena's two train stations:

- Jena-Paradies: for all north-southbound connections (Berlin / Leipzig – Munich)
- Jena-West: for east-westbound connections (e.g., from Frankfurt (airport) via Erfurt)

From both stations, you will easily reach the city centre by foot (within 5 minutes from Jena-Paradies and 15 minutes from Jena-West, respectively). If your accommodation is situated outside the city centre, you may use the local public transport (bus and tram): <https://www.nahverkehr-jena.de/fahrplan/liniennetzplan.html>. (Please note that, in some hotels, a bus/tram ticket for the duration of your stay is included in the room rate). There is also taxi service available at the train stations.

Registration on site (check-In):

Registration desk (check-In) is open on Sunday, 17th September, from 2.00 to 6.00 p.m. You will get all your conference documents there. For those who arrive later, registration will be possible all over the week, of course!

There will be informal meetings within the different sections on Sunday (17th September) evening. Details about the particular dates and locations will be made known on the DOT website some days before.
